(A quotation like "DK 12A17" means: "Diels/Kranz, Anaximander, doxographical report no.17"). 2. The "Boundless" as Principle. According to Aristotle and Theophrastus, the first Greek philosophers were looking for the "origin" or "principle" (the Greek word "archê" has both meanings) of all things.

Anaximander | Internet Encyclopedia of Philosophy

Horses were frequently protected with a padded or metal chest protector (peytral) which hung around the animal's neck. They might also have a metal plate protecting the head and the eyes were very often covered. Saddles were given a higher back (especially in Germany) to make it easier for the knight to stay in it when struck by an opponent's ...
